

THE MOHAVE MINER.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE COUNTY

A Prairie Post Graduate.

So! Back from school, Chiquita!
Come, tell—what did you learn?
What! All that stuff? Well sure enough
Those teachers ought to burn.

I'd like to know what reasons
They can advance who say
The sun controls the seasons,
And even makes the day—

When anyone can see, dear,
Who half an eye has got,
'Tis day when you're with me, dear,
And night when you are not.

How blind a little learning
Does make that sort of men!
The stars up yonder burning
They say are "planets"—when

They are (plain truth as this is;
E'en blindness should accept)
Our tally-sheet of kisses
The watchful night has kept.

Such dogmas false and harmful
You must not credit, dear,
Why, the world is just an armful—
I hold it here!

Ah, no! These prosy teachers
But lead the mind astray.
The only creed that we shall need
Is this—and this!

Chas. F. Lammis, in Pack.

No other cause has been more prolific of injury to the mining interests of southern Arizona than the persistent, and too often successful, efforts of somebody to deceive some other body with reference to the quality or quantity of the mineral in certain mines or districts. Ignorance or lack of experience on the part of operators has blundered along for years in some instances, and squandered fortunes without compensatory returns, and finally given it up, branding the camp with a black eye, where, on the other hand, an honest, experienced miner, would have made a success from the beginning; but it is from false or exaggerated reports for the purpose of entrapping the unwary investor, or bleeding the stockholders, that most just complaint comes, and the deepest injury flows, not only on account of the capital wasted, but still more because of shattered confidence in the property of the district, as well as the men in general representing the mining industry of the district. There can be no doubt that this pernicious effect reaches every portion of this territory, spreading its demoralizing influence throughout. Mining is a pursuit in which the practice of honesty would in the end pay good dividends.—Tucson Star.

Neally Stevens, the fair haired pianist of the west, has filled ninety-one engagements this season. The young artist is famous, not only for her musical gifts, but for her beautiful hands and arms. Adeline Patti raved over the tiny, dimpled baby hands, and photographers, artists and sculptors are never weary of reproducing the exquisite lines of her arms. Miss Stevens is a graduate of Vassar, and earns more money than any other pianist, unless it may be Aus der Ohe.

Col. Herring has been dubbed the "corporation" lawyer and the e are many persons who believe that he will oppose the adoption of the constitution now being formed for the reason that corporations do not want statehood. On the other hand the Colonel has a host of staunch friends and among them the Prospector, who believe that he will be in the front rank battling for its adoption, even though it is not quite to his liking—Prospector.

The property owners and taxpayers of Arizona are the classes from which the largest vote for the constitution will come. As a general thing politics will make no difference with them, it is a matter of the future welfare of this country that they consider. And well they may, as we want more people here to help work out the grand destiny of this favored land.—Gazette.

Tommy Warren was knocked out in the twenty-first round by Cal. McCarthy, on the night of Sept. 23d, at New Orleans. The purse was $1,500. Warren fought desperately, but McCarthy's cleverness and long reaches were too much for him and he was badly punished.

It is asserted that New York produces and eats more pies than any city in the world. There are eight or ten large factories that make nothing but pies, and there are five or six hundred bakeries besides that deal exclusively in them.

The origin of washing the hands before eating arose from the fact that meals in olden times often consisted wholly of pie, which was eaten with the hands. It was this custom which gave rise to the fork.

The new minister was from the city and was trying to make friends with the farmer's cows. Said he: "They don't seem to like me." "That's very strange, I never yet saw cattle that did not like green pastor."
